

QUOTE: Two old people stood in the doorway, their faces lighting up. "Albert!" Their voices piped and they rushed out to embrace and pat him on the back and move around him. "Albert, oh, Albert, it's been so many years! How you've grown, boy, how big you are, boy, oh, Albert boy, how are you!"

QUOTE: She hesitates. The she smiles. In that moment I feel the chill at the back of my skull, the sensation as of a steel needle driven deep through bone. I stiffen. My arms drop away from her. For an instant, I lose touch, and when the mists clear all is different. "Charles?" she says. "Charles?"

QUOTE: "Why does the enemy always outnumber us?" ... "I will tell you, even though the information is secret. You see, the enemy attacked us first. He had good reason to attack us, but that is a matter for politicians, and whether the fault was ours or his, we could not let him win. So when the enemy came to out worlds, we fought back, hard, and spent the finest of our young men in the fleets. But we won, and the enemy retreated."
